The Death of Daniel Webster.
[From George Ticknor Curtis' "Life of Daniel Webster."]

He then looked inquiringly around the room, as if to see that all were there whom he wished to address. As he was manifestly about to say something that ought to be preserved, I sat down at a table, in front of which some of the ladies were standing, and on which there happened to be ink and paper (the pen was still in my hand), and wrote down the words just as they fell from his lips. He spoke in a strong, full voice, that might have been heard over half the house, and with his usual modulation and emphasis, but very slowly and with an occasional pause. He said:

"My general wish on earth has been to do my Maker's will. I thank Him now for all the mercies that surround me. I thank Him for the means he has given me of doing some little good; for my children—those beloved objects—for my nature and associations. I thank Him that I am to die, if I am, under so many circumstances of love and affection. I thank Him for all His cares. No man, who is not a brute, can say that he is not afraid of death. No man can come back from that bourne; no man can comprehend the will of the works of God. That there is a God, all must acknowledge. I see Him in all these wondrous works, Himself how wondrous! The great mystery is Jesus Christ—the gospel. What would be the condition of any of us if we had not the hope of immortality?
What ground is there to rest upon but the gospel? There were hopes of the immortality of the soul, running down, especially among the Jews. The Jews believed in a spiritual origin of creation. The Romans never reached it.
The Greeks never reached it. It is a tradition that communication was made to the Jews by God Himself, through Moses and the fathers.
But there, even to the Jews, no direct assurance of immortality in heaven. There is now and then a scattered intimation, as in Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," but a proper consideration of that does not refer it to Jesus Christ at all. But there were intimations—crepuscular—twilight. But, but, but thank God, the gospel of Jesus Christ has brought life and immortality to light—rescued it—brought it to light. There is an admirable discourse on that subject by Dr. Barrow, preacher to the Inner Temple. I think it is his sixth sermon. Well, I don't feel as if I am to fall off. I may."

He paused a short time; a drowsiness appeared to come over him, and his eyes were closed. In a moment or two he opened them, and looking eagerly around he asked: "Have I—wife, son, doctor, friends, are you all here?
—have I on this occasion, said anything unworthy of Daniel Webster?" "No, no, dear sir!" was the response from all. He then began the words of the Lord's Prayer; and after the first sentence, feeling faint, he cried out earnestly, "hold me up; I do not wish to pray with a fainting voice." He was instantly raised a little by a movement of the pillows, and then repeated the whole of the prayer in clear and distinct tones, ending his devotions with these words:

"And now unto God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost be praise forever and forever! I peace on earth and good will to men—that is the happiness, the essence—good will toward men."
It was past midnight, when, awakening from the slumbers that he had at intervals, he seemed not to know whether he had not already passed from his earthly existence. He made a strong effort to ascertain what the consciousness that he could still perceive, and he actually said, and then uttered those well known words, "I still live!" as if he had satisfied himself of the fact that he was striving to know. They were his last coherent utterance. A good deal later he said something in which the word "poetry" was distinctly heard. His son immediately repeated to him one of the stanzas of Gray's "Elegy." He heard it and smiled. After this, his respiration became more difficult, and at length it went on with perceptible intervals.
All was now hushed within the chamber; and to us who stood watching, there were but three sounds in Nature; the sighing of the autumn wind in the trees, the slow ticking of the clock in the hall below, and the deep breathing of our dying friend. Moments that seemed hours flowed on. Still the measured beat of time fell painfully distinct upon our ears; still the gentle moaning of the wind mingled with the only sound that arose within the room; for there were no sobs of woman, no movements of men. So grand, and yet so calm and simple, had been his approach to the moment when we must know he is with us no more, that he had lived into a composure, which, but for his great example, we could not have felt. At twenty-three minutes before 3 o'clock his breathing ceased; the features settled into a superb repose, and Dr. Jeffries, who still held the pulse, after waiting for a few seconds, gently laid down the arm, and amid a breathless silence, pronounced the single word "Dead." The eyes were then closed, the remains were removed from the position in which death came, and all but those who had been appointed to wait and watch, slowly and mournfully walked away. Thus there passed out of this world the great soul of Daniel Webster; devotedly thankful for the good he had been permitted to do, conscious of the honor of life in all his rich affections and splendid faculties, fully believing that he was entering another state of existence, and humbly trusting that his aims on earth had been to do the will of Him to whom he felt that all created intelligence and all human power are to render up their account.

Recently Capt. Mason, of Way Key, Fla., was standing on the porch of his hotel, when an elderly lady came out of the building. The rain had been falling, and consequently the middle of the street was wet. "I should like to get across the street without wetting my feet," said the lady. "I can help you to cross," the Captain responded. "Oh dear! I shall feel so much obliged to you," the lady said;
"my feet have not been wet in twenty years."
"For Heaven's sake, Madam," said the Captain, "don't show them to me."
